

THE FALKNER SCHOOL FOR HOMEOPATHY

PRESENTING A ONE-DAY SEMINAR ON THE OBJECTIVE OBSERVER APPROACH

Objective, unprejudiced observation is the essential foundation informing every aspect of homeopathy, from provings to case-taking, from case analysis and repertorization to remedy selection and case management. Developing the facility for impartial observation is arguably the most important skill for any homeopath, because only objective observation---as Hahnemann describes in Aphorism 3---can allow one to clearly perceive what it is that needs to be cured in each individual case of disease, as well as to identify and recognize the best remedy for cure.

In spite of all the popular systems and methods taught today, you, the homeopath, are the most important tool in the toolbox. This seminar will explore the ways and means to becoming a powerful objective observer, and highlight some of the important guideposts that prepare us and lead us on the way. Philosophy, practical exercises, lively discussion, and work with cases will serve to demonstrate this approach. You will take home a new perspective that you can immediately apply to bring more success to all of your work and learning going forward.
